TROOPS NEEDED IN IRELAND

Victor Herbert, the noted composer and bandmaster, of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick of New York City, and one of the chief participants in the recent Irish race convention, has issued the following statement in regard to Ireland's position in the present war:

On the memorable night in 1914, after the opening of the war, when John Redmond arose in the House of Commons and promised the support of the Irish people to England in this war, he in reality abdicated the position he had held for some years as the spokesman of Ireland. He came out in his true colors as a British Imperialist and a man to whom the welfare of England was dearer and closer than is the liberty of Ireland. The truth is that Redmond has long ceased to be an Irishman in everything but name. His antecedents, his early training, his social surroundings and environment, his long association with Englishmen and English movements—and latterly his interests—all draw him in the direction of England. They have made him a convert to the belief that the preservation of the British Empire is a vital necessity to mankind and that Ireland must be content to play a very subordinate part in it in order that there may be no disorganization within the empire and no interference with the Anglo-Saxon dream of governing the world.

He has of late years become obsessed with the notion of English might and power. Living in the center of her empire he has been so impressed with her numbers and area as to confound them with real strength. He has not seen, as have so many thoughtful observers throughout the world, the cankers eating away at her vitals and the decay which has been sapping her energy and her power. Therefore at the outbreak of the war it seemed to him inevitable that England and her mighty allies must conquer in the strife against the Central Powers. Without stopping to consult with the opinions, the sentiments or the interests of the Irish people, without even, it is said, consulting with his associate members of Parliament, he staked all upon his belief in the invincibility of England. He committed Ireland—as far as he could—to a policy which would have made her forget the past and forego her rights, and have bound her more closely than ever to the chariot wheels of a triumphant and remorseless England.

But Redmond failed to take into account either the true strength of the Central Powers or the depth and intensity of Ireland's love of liberty and hatred of oppression. He believed, in common with the other English leaders, that Berlin and Vienna would be captured within a few weeks after the beginning of the war, and that Germany and Austria must speedily succumb to the unprecedented combination of forces made against them. How greatly he and they erred is known even to the ordinary observer here in America in spite of all that the overworked censor can do to misrepresent the truth and to turn Allied defeats and retreatments into victory and triumph. The months that have passed have shown only one triumph after another for the Central Powers and today we see them upon the soil of their enemies winning victory after victory and advancing from one triumph to another.

But it was with relation to Ireland that Redmond was most wrong and that his judgment was the least of all based upon facts. Colored as his views had become toward England he failed to grasp the fact that the mass of the Irish people—following in the footsteps of the generations that had preceded them—clung tenaciously to their ideas of nationality and their love of liberty and could not be cajoled any more than they could be forced to regard England as other than a tyrant and an oppressor whose rule was to be borne while it must be, but was to be thrown off as soon as possible and whenever God given opportunity would enable the men of Ireland to do so.

Certainly Mr. Redmond had read Irish history to little effect if he did not realize the saying of Wolfe Tone that "the connection between England and Ireland was the curse of Ireland" had sunk into the very heart of the Irish nature and was one of the most cherished beliefs of the mass of the people. He hurried to Ireland in his new ardor, made himself the chief recruiting sergeant of the King's mad attempt to get the young men of Ireland to go out to fight in Flanders or Gallipoli. He has failed most ingloriously even according to his own admissions in his effort to turn Ireland into a conquered province of England and have her take her place with the Allies of England in this war of attempted extermination against peoples and nations that have never injured Ireland or wronged or oppressed Irish men.

A month ago he claimed 350,000 Irishmen had joined the English colors. Driven from that absurdity by the showing up of the official figures he reduced that number last Sunday to 150,000. As matter of fact, he is still more than 50,000 above the official figures. When one takes into account the means resorted to in Ireland to drive men out of employment so they may have no choice but to enlist; the campaign of abuse and misrepresentation unblushingly carried on by the Government in Ireland to arouse the passions of the people and the existence in Ireland of that large portion of the people who represent what is known as the permanent garrison of the country, the result is quite negligible.

It shows conclusively that the people are true to their old ideals and will have none of Redmond and his new doctrine of trusting to the justice of England because England is now in a desperate situation fighting for her very life and ready to make any promise which will not require immediate parting with that control over Ireland which she regards as the very breath of her life and the deprivation of which would mean her certain reduction to the position of Holland or of Spain. Ireland today, Redmond to the contrary notwithstanding, is not with England in this great war. The great mass of the people realize that it is England's and not Ireland's war. They have no love for England or for English methods or theories of government. They have nothing but hatred and hostility for English government. They have a burning desire to see English power destroyed and driven out of Ireland, not partially or temporarily, but fully and for all time.

England has labored to shut Ireland off from the rest of the world, to keep out all news from the outside and to prevent any information from Ireland reaching the outside world, and particularly from reaching America. But in spite of a measure of success in this work, she has largely failed, and news has been going into and coming out of Ireland during the whole course of the war. This has enabled us to know with certainty that Ireland is not in any sense of the word loyal to England. If she were so it would not be necessary to suppress, as England has suppressed, more than a dozen newspapers. It would not be necessary to make arrests in every corner of Ireland under the defense of the realm act, and to summarily drive men out of their country without written charges or even the farce of a trial.

It would not be necessary to break up meetings, interfere with gatherings of the Irish volunteers, arrest and imprison men in three of the provinces for possessing arms, as fourth. And, more than all, when England and her allies are in such dire need of men at the front, to keep in Ireland the huge army of occupation, which shows that England still regards Ireland as a conquered country and not as a contented, loyal and satisfied English shire. The best informed and clearest minds in Ireland recognize that victory for England in this war means an unsupportable burden of taxation for Ireland as her portion of the "victory." Probably in no other way could Redmond be shown to be more completely out of touch with Ireland than in his position on the question of increased taxation which is now agitating Ireland from Cape Clear to the Giants' Causeway.

But Redmond failed to take into account either the true strength of the Central Powers or the depth and intensity of Ireland's love of liberty and hatred of oppression. He believed, in common with the other English leaders, that Berlin and Vienna would be captured within a few weeks after the beginning of the war, and that Germany and Austria must speedily succumb to the unprecedented combination of forces made against them. How greatly he and they erred is known even to the ordinary observer here in America in spite of all that the overworked censor can do to misrepresent the truth and to turn Allied defeats and retreatments into victory and triumph. The months that have passed have shown only one triumph after another for the Central Powers and today we see them upon the soil of their enemies winning victory after victory and advancing from one triumph to another.

EXPLAINED

The Slaying of Priests in Their Churches During Present Conflict.

Moderate and Just Statement of
Prof. Aloys Schulte of Brown University.

Actions Extreme in Appearance
Carried Out in Good Faith.

TWO EXTREMES IN THE CASE

During the present great war in Europe priests have been slain in their churches by the invading soldiery. Much bitter controversy has been created thereby. In France and Belgium it is charged that this was but one of a series of premeditated brutalities coolly planned by the German invaders; in Germany it is said, on the other hand, that the number of priests who were slain has been greatly exaggerated and that those who were thus killed were illegitimately engaged in assisting the enemy and thus deserved the fate which was allotted to them. In the former countries it is moreover asserted that Protestant troops were especially chosen to enter Belgium in order the more thoroughly to wreak vengeance on the conquered people. This is emphatically denied by the Germans.

A more moderate and just explanation of the whole matter is given by Prof. Aloys Schulte, of the University of Bonn, a noted historian and a Catholic. In a recent issue of the International Monthly Review for Science, Art and Technique, Prof. Schulte says:

"In times of war in all countries only one rule is recognized, all without exception are bound to obey the laws promulgated by the military authority. Church servants who are not strictly connected with their parish church naturally escape the suspicion of the enemy. To the Protestant preacher and the rabbi church or synagogue are a house for preaching first and then a house for prayer; their use is confined to one day in a week. Preacher and rabbi very often wear a dress that prevents their being recognized as such. The relation of the Catholic pastor to his church is much closer; he there holds his religious services every day, there the Blessed Sacrament is kept. If he wishes to go to the sick or wounded to bring them the Viaticum he first must visit the church and afterward return to it. The Protestant pastor or the rabbi is not forced to go to the church building while the combat is going on, but the Catholic priest must remove the Blessed Sacrament from the altar to save it from disturbance and must conceal it. He can be easily recognized by his attire.

"We therefore can readily understand in the first place that an invading enemy more frequently meets a Catholic priest in the church building than a Protestant minister. If the alien soldiery are storming a church tower to destroy the rifle machine which has been placed there, almost certain destruction is due to the pastor who happens at such a time to leave the church. Can it not be clearly seen how the soldiers would in such an instance act in good faith and at the same time perhaps slay an absolutely innocent man?"

It is always well in matters such as these to take into consideration the whole circumstances in a case. In war many things occur which in ordinary life would be impossible. The situation of the invading army in the instance mentioned here could readily be grasped. It can certainly be seen how its actions might be extreme in appearance and yet be carried out entirely in good faith, as stated by Prof. Schulte. C. B. of C. V.

FEAST OF ST. PAUL

Next Monday the feast of St. Paul of the Cross, transferred this year from April 28 to May 1 because of the late coming of Easter, will be observed with great solemnity at the Passionist Retreat on the Newburg road. The masses will be at 5:30, 6:30, 7 and 10 o'clock, the last a solemn high mass, at which the Rev. Father Charles Maddox, a noted Redemptorist priest, will preach the panegyric. In the afternoon at 3 o'clock there will be solemn vespers, the sermon to be preached by the Very Rev. Cletus Brady, rector of the monastery. Beginning after the high mass and during the day the blessing with the relic of St. Paul of the Cross will be given. Many will be interested to learn that the Portuncula indulgence may be gained at each separate visit to the church beginning at 3 p. m. on Sunday, the vigil of the feast, the usual condition of confession to be complied with. The ladies of the parish will serve coffee and sandwiches free at noon time. All friends of the Passionist fathers are cordially invited to help in the suitable celebration of this year's feast of the Passionist order.

RECENT DEATHS

The funeral of Theodore Howe, for many years a resident of St. Peter's parish, was held Tuesday morning, attended by many friends and relatives. He was fifty-eight years of age and unmarried. Two brothers, John and Frank Howe, survived him.

Early Monday morning death claimed Harry T. Murphy, son of Mrs. Frances and the late George Murphy. The deceased was nineteen years old and a popular member of Mackin Council, Y. M. I. His funeral was held Wednesday morning from St. Cecilia's church.

Pneumonia proved fatal Tuesday to Thomas Smith, at his home at 2006 Portland avenue. He was for many years employed by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company and was held in high esteem by a wide circle of acquaintances. Surviving him are his wife, two sons and two daughters. The funeral was held yesterday morning at St. Patrick's church.

The death of Mrs. Elizabeth Rankin, widow of Arthur Rankin, takes from St. Cecilia's church another of its old and devout members. Her funeral was held Tuesday morning, the church being thronged by mourning friends. Surviving her are one daughter, Mrs. C. E. Purdy, with whom she lived; a son, George C. Rankin, and two sisters, Mrs. Nellie Hulkins and Mrs. William Patterson.

MISSION OF IRELAND

In a recent address Archbishop Mundelein said: "Sometimes I wonder whether God has not kept Ireland from being a nation in order that she might contribute the larger share to the growth, to the greatness, to the glory of the newer lands and newer peoples, who today form the foremost countries in the world."

STATE DEMOCRATS IN HARMONY

A typical example of the Roosevelt booster is shown in the Louisville Herald of Thursday morning in the published statement of Matt Holt, a Bull Moose leader. The statement being one of series run by the Herald telling the people why Roosevelt is needed as president. The headline to start with was misleading, it reading, "Say Country Calls Colonel," but in the article doesn't tell what they are calling the Colonel, as many are calling him a "four flusher," "blusterer," "fake fire-eater," and even other things too rough to print. Rooseveltian style is shown in one of the expressions used by his local follower:

"We will have as President a real man with red blood in his veins. The United States will no longer eat dirt. Let us have Roosevelt and no pussyfooting."

The Rough Rider himself could hardly improve on that rather inelegant suggestion about the "United States eating dirt." Further along Mr. Holt shows himself to be a humorist when he stated that "Theodore Roosevelt, courting unpopularity of the most violent kind, has led America to the verge of a great change, less commercialism, and an awakened patriotism." Can you imagine Teddy courting unpopularity—the greatest self-advertiser and grandstand player the world has ever known?

Roosevelt blustering and bluffing tactics are shown in the way he has bulldozed and bluffed the old leaders in the Republican party—he having told them "you'll take me or a third party opposition again," the bluff having worked to perfection, and it is pretty near all over but the shouting. The Rough Rider will be given the nomination in the Chicago convention to the accompaniment of a lot of horse play and flag waving, with specially trained cowboys from the wild and wooly West to whoop 'em up through the proceedings.

To the credit of the majority of the Republicans they see through Roosevelt's tactics and know him for what he is—a player to the galleries and a press agent (for himself) all the year around. But the Progressives for the most part are composed of the gullible kind who swallow all of that bunk and can be depended upon at any time to work themselves into a frenzy at the mention of the name of their idol. They will be found in great numbers at Chicago going around wild-eyed, furnishing an inexhaustible supply of enthusiasm for the promotion of their favorite. Very few of this class of people ever take a conservative view of anything and they are ever marks for popular fake, the mysterious giant of Barry & Bailey—in other words they come under the head of those whom Abraham Lincoln said, "You could fool all of the time."

With the nomination of Roosevelt the American people will witness another repetition of the Bryan campaigns of 1896 and 1900. Roosevelt will tour the country, making fiery speeches, breathing brimstone and fire against all of the other nations of the world, and as in Bryan's case he will be cheered by millions, but again as in Bryan's case these millions somehow or another will vote the other way on election day. In Bryan's case if everyone that cheered him had voted the Democratic ticket his majority would have been too big to count. This also applies to Roosevelt. When he rushes down to the footlights, with the American flag wrapped about him he will hear the loud hurrahs of the people, many of whom appreciate melodrama, but the day after and on second sober thought they will be half ashamed of themselves, the result being that they will vote for Wilson, the conservative, against Roosevelt, the fire-eater. In noise demonstrations the war advocates always seem to be in the majority, but when the real count is taken the peace supporters always lead by a large majority.

Kentucky Democrats are pleased at the result of the recent peace conference among the leaders, which straightened out the tangle between the State administration, and the outlook for a harmonious convention at Lexington is very bright. It is an assured fact that Percy Haley, disturber of Democratic peace, will be on the outside looking in, and now only one more thing is needed to make it a wholesale peace party, and that is the retirement of W. B. Haldeman from the contest for National Committeeman. District conventions will be held Saturday afternoon, May 20, and the convention will be called in Lexington on Wednesday, May 24. The State convention will choose four delegates from the State at large, or maybe eight, with half of vote each, and two delegates from each of the eleven districts. Senators James and Beekman, Gov. Stover, ex-Senator Camden, ex-Gov. McCreary, Judge Allie Young, Mayor Buschmeyer and Congressman Cantrell will be the eight if eight are chosen, while Col. James P. Whalen and Col. John J. Barry will be the two from the Fifth district.

HOLY NAME SMOKER.

The Holy Name Society of St. Louis Bertrand's church held one of their series of smokers Tuesday evening in Bertrand Hall, A. J. Chappelle giving his illustrated lecture on the national forces of the United States, the relative strength of the army and navy being compared to that of the other leading powers. The lecture was much enjoyed by those present as the subject is a very timely one to the average male audience. Rev. J. F. Fitzgerald, pastor of St. Leo's church of Highland Park, also addressed the gathering, telling of his early experience as an altar boy in Ireland and of his continual close association with the Dominican fathers. Father Fitzgerald's address was interspersed with many little humorous anecdotes and references, which was much enjoyed by his hearers, and at the close President Harry T. Fischer and other officers of the society expressed the wish that the speaker would consent to address them in the near future with a prepared talk, and when a large attendance would be present.

Rev. Father V. G. Cleary also made a short talk. Rev. Father R. G. Lyons, chaplain of the Holy Name Society, presided, and others of the clergy present were Rev. Father T. L. Crowley and Father J. L. Finnerty.

UNIQUE WAR EXHIBIT.

A unique assortment of articles made by prisoners of war in the department camp at Douglas, Isle of Man, and Bermuda are on exhibit at the store of Hubbell Bros. & Wellendorff, 522 West Market street, where they are attracting much attention. The Friends' Emergency Committee in London shipped these pieces to the Relief Committee in New York City, who forwarded some of them to the Louisville Woman's Auxiliary of the German-American Alliance, of which Mrs. Louise Dravenstedt is the head.

Beginning with the arrival of the delegates there will be something doing in the way of Kentucky hospitality all the time. Through the courtesy of the Knights of Columbus the delegates and visitors will be guests Monday night at the smoker in honor of the State Council, which convenes Tuesday. For Tuesday the programme will be very interesting. The Uniform Rank and members of the local branches will assemble at the Tyler Hotel at 8:30 and act as escort to the MARY'S MONTH.

The beautiful month of May is consecrated to the Mother of God. Catholics young and old should cultivate devotion to the Blessed Virgin, as it is a virtue that will stay with them all their lives. St. Bernard tells us that "it was never known that anyone who implored the assistance of the Mother of God was left unaided." The best way to keep the month of May would be by going to mass, but where this can not be done we would suggest that a decade of the rosary be said daily, which all the children of the family could say in common as their evening prayers.

IRISH SITUATION GRAVE.

All Ireland was placed under martial law Thursday afternoon, when the uprising at Dublin was still acute and the disturbance spreading over entire Ireland. Premier Asquith, in the House of Commons, admitted that the Irish situation, caused by burdensome and unjust taxation, still presented serious features and that there were indications of a spread of the movement to other parts of Ireland, especially the West. This is evidence that the Irish people are not against Germany, and bear out our contention that the masses oppose England. Despite the rigid censorship, it was learned that Major Gen. Sir John Maxwell, who formerly commanded the British forces in Egypt, was leaving for Ireland.

Sir Edward Carson and John Redmond, who were the leaders of the opposing factions in the Irish home rule controversy, expressed in the House of Commons their abhorrence of the uprising and their desire to support the Government.

This proclamation of martial law throughout Ireland indicates an extension of disturbances, details of which the press censorship is withholding. Cable dispatches Wednesday and early Thursday gave the impression that the British authorities had the situation in Ireland well in hand, but to these there can be given only little credence.

POPE AND THE JEWS.

The American Jewish Committee find consolation and hope in the remarkable letter written them in the name of His Holiness Pope Benedict XV. by the Cardinal Secretary of State. This beautiful letter, breathing the Christ-like spirit of peace and love, has been received with great satisfaction by those to whom it is addressed. Herman Bernstein thus comments on it in the American Hebrew:

Among all the Papal bulls ever issued with regard to the Jews throughout the history of the Vatican there is no statement that equals this direct, unmistakable plea for equality for the Jews and against prejudice or religious grounds. The bull issued by Innocent IV, declaring the Jews innocent of the charge of using Christian blood for ritual purposes, while a remarkable document, was after all merely a statement of fact, whereas the present statement by Pope Benedict XV. is a plea against religious prejudice and opposition to John Bull.

DISTINCT LOSS.

The departure of Col. R. W. Brown to make his home in New York means a distinct loss to Louisville, his "live wire" abilities having meant much to the city's progress and this same ability will enable him to make his mark in the busy whirl of Gotham. "Good luck, Col. Bob, and may your shadow ne'er grow less."

CHICKEN HEARTED.

Englishmen will not fight for their country and give queer excuses to avoid going to the front, while trying to draw men from Ireland and the colonies into the war.

The newest "conscientious objector" that Britshers are reading about and laughing at just now is the gentleman whose "conscience" will not permit him to don khaki and go to war. All over the country tribunals have been established at which one may appear to show cause why one should not be registered and become available for military service. Some of the excuses are novel, some dramatic, and others comic, but they are mostly the walls of chicken hearted creatures who apparently have more interest in keeping their hides intact than in chasing the Kaiser's hordes back over the Rhine. The following are some samples:

"War is the invention of the devil," said Henry Bellamore at Bath, and added that so great were his objections to any kind of work connected with war that if he saw a wounded soldier with crutches fall to the street he would not help him to his feet again. He would leave a wounded soldier to die, because to succor him would be against his conscience.

JEW WINS PRIZE.

George Helford, of Washington, D. C., who is private secretary to Congressman O'Shaughnessy, of Rhode Island, won the first prize at a debate at the Georgetown University Law School recently. He is the first Jewish young man to win a first prize at the Georgetown University Law School, which is a Catholic institution.

STINGING REBUKE.

Representative Ben Johnson, of Kentucky, last Saturday made a stinging rebuke and statement on the floor of the House regarding the paternity of the bill providing for a reorganization of the Juvenile Court in the District of Columbia, under which an anti-Catholic publication, issued in Missouri, asserts "Protestant children would be placed in Roman Catholic prisons." Congressman Johnson called attention to the fact that Representative Tinkham, of Massachusetts, who has charge of the bill on the floor, is a Thirty-second degree Mason. "I introduced this bill at the request of those who prepared it," said Representative Johnson. "The bigoted alarmist may say that because I, a Catholic, introduced the bill it is sufficient proof of itself of its unholy purpose. I was asked to introduce the bill because I happen to be Chairman of the District Committee. Among those who asked me to introduce it is Judge J. W. Latimer, of the present Juvenile Court. Is he a Catholic, taking orders from the Pope to fill Roman Catholic prisons? When this bill becomes a law its execution will be in the hands of Judge Latimer, a Mason. Let us see who drafted the bill. A Presbyterian Attorney General appointed a committee of five persons deemed competent to draft the bill, and fair-minded enough to write a bill free from both religious prejudices and religious performances in keeping with the constitution. They were Miss Julia Lathrop, Washington; Bernard Flexner, Chicago; Dr. William J. Kirby, Walter C. Clephane and William H. Baldwin. Miss Lathrop is a Congregationalist, Mr. Flexner a Jew, Mr. Clephane and Dr. Baldwin both Presbyterians, and Dr. Kirby is the only Catholic among them all."

POPE'S EASTER MESSAGE.

Pope Benedict XV. cabled the following Easter message to Cardinal Gaspari, Papal Secretary of State, containing a prayer for peace and an appeal to all nations now neutral to refrain from entering the world war.

The message was as follows:

"Peace be with you"—these sweet words the risen Saviour spoke to the Apostles. The Holy Father redresses to all men, "May the nations at peace preserve it, thanking God for so great a blessing. May those at war presently, laying down the sword, end the slaughter dishonoring Europe and humanity."

What the Club Plan Is AND What It Means to You

The Club Plan is an extended payment plan instituted purely and simply for the convenience of our patrons who wish to buy Household Goods, such as Furniture, Carpets, Rugs, etc.

When you join the Club Plan you are asked to pay 3 per cent. of the amount of your purchases for joining; for instance

The membership fee on a $25.00 purchase would be 75c.

The membership fee on a $50.00 purchase would be $1.50.

The membership fee on greater purchases would of course be in proportion.

You are then asked to pay 10 per cent. of your total purchase as the first payment. For instance, on a $25.00 purchase you pay $2.50 down in addition to the membership fee, making a total of $3.25. The goods are then delivered to you and you arrange to pay the balance in small weekly or monthly payments.

When you consider that goods bought on the Club Plan are purchased at our cash prices—whether special or regular—you will more clearly see that our membership fee is nothing in comparison with the additional cost installment houses place on their goods for the privilege of time payments.

FURNITURE, CARPETS, RUGS, HOUSE FURNISHINGS AND OTHER HOUSEHOLD GOODS ARE SOLD ON THE CLUB PLAN.

Any further information regarding the Club Plan will be cheerfully given by our salespeople or at the Credit office on the fifth floor.

SPREAD OF ROSARY.

The general intention recommended by His Holiness Pope Benedict for the month of May is the spread of the Rosary. For many centuries in the church of God the Rosary has been a favorite devotion. The form of prayer is so simple and the prayers and meditations are so sublime that the popularity of the devotion is not surprising. It can be taught to the simple little child and it appeals to the most learned.

By his recommendation our Holy Father shows his desire that the use of the Rosary should be even more widespread. The power of the Rosary has often been attested in the history of the church, as we learn from the letters of many Supreme Pontiffs, and every Catholic who says it daily has no doubt experienced the wonderful effects of our Lady's intercession in preserving her clients from evil of body and soul. Catholic parents should train their children from the earliest years to love the Rosary. It will be a strong protection for them throughout their lives.

An additional motive for fidelity may be found in the numerous indulgences granted by the Holy See to those who carry and say the beads. They afford us frequent opportunity of blotting out our own temporal punishment and of helping the poor souls in purgatory.

MICHAEL O'SULLIVAN.

City Building Inspector William J. O'Sullivan on Tuesday received the sad news of the death at Los Angeles of his venerable father, Michael O'Sullivan, for many years a widely known and respected resident of Louisville. Mr. O'Sullivan was born in County Clare, Ireland, eighty-seven years ago, coming to this country in 1833 with his mother, who located at Syracuse, N. Y., where he took great interest in Catholic church affairs, for a number of years being Superintendent of the Sunday-school at St. John's church in the old Fourth ward. The family moved to Louisville in 1869, the deceased engaging in the shoemaking business in a shop on Fifth street opposite the Cathedral, which soon became a gathering place for well educated men who discussed philosophy, literature, history and world politics. Twenty years ago his wife, who was Miss Ann Dwyer, also a native of County Clare, passed away. To them were born nine children, all of whom survive. They are the Rev. Hugh O'Sullivan, of Whitesville, and the Rev. Anthony O'Sullivan, of Mayfield, both of the diocese of Louisville; the Rev. St. John O'Sullivan, formerly of the diocese of Louisville, now of the mission at San Juan Capistrano, Cal.; Miss Lucy O'Sullivan, of Los Angeles; M. J. O'Sullivan, of Los Angeles; W. J. O'Sullivan and Patrick O'Sullivan, of Louisville, and Frank and Joseph O'Sullivan, of Chicago. Several years ago Mr. O'Sullivan went to California, residing with his son, the Rev. St. John O'Sullivan, at the old mission of San Juan Capistrano until recently, when he went to the home of his son in Los Angeles, where his death was due to infirmities incident to old age. The remains are expected to arrive here tomorrow and the funeral will take place Monday morning from the Cathedral, after which the body will be laid to rest beside that of his wife in St. Louis cemetery. His life was well spent and when the summons called him he was fully prepared for the next life.
